Yocova Partner PLANELOGIX launches new application to promote aircraft value protection

PLANELOGIX, the US-based company that specialises in complete paper-to-digital conversion for aircraft maintenance records, has recently launched a new application. Originally driven by issues arising from aircraft maintenance records historically being predominantly paper based, the team at PLANELOGIX developed a solution to easily convert paper records into a searchable digital format that can be securely backed up and stored. Accurate logbooks account for protecting 60% of the value of an aircraft, so PLANELOGIX created a 'go-to' solution that would securely support that. The new application makes the process efficient and easy, to:

- Protect logbooks and records from damage and loss
- Increase the resale value of aircraft and decrease purchase due diligence time
- Improve safety and transparency
- Keep track of due maintenance, AD's, FARs and Service Bulletins
- Catch and prevent errors and omissions from mechanics
- Quickly and safely share aircraft records with others, such as banks, insurers and mechanics

About PLANELOGIX

PLANELOGIX is a US-based company specialising in complete paper to record digital aircraft maintenance record conversion. The development of its solutions was driven by the fact that there was no easy and secure way to manage maintenance records, which were largely paper based. With PLANELOGIX solutions, records can easily be converted into a searchable digital format and securely backed up and stored. Once digitized, maintenance tracking, squawk management, and much more is possible through the app.
